You are a student interested in sharing your university projects and newly acquired knowledge with the world?

Then join this 2-day interactive workshop, which teaches you the basic concepts and skills of science communication and science blogging.

Learn how to capture your audience and relate the relevance of your science projects to non-experts in a simple, short, and exciting manner.

This project has received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under grant agreement No 101035795.
